HOME WHICH HAS MANY ADVANTAGES

Two-Storyed Structure Always a Favorite With Builders in Every Locality.

ATTRACTIVE AND "LIVABLE"

Construction Offers Itself Especially to Distinctive Architectural Design, and Interior May Be Laid Out to the Best Possible Advantage.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the reader of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The typical construction for houses in our smaller cities throughout the country has been, for some time, a two-storyed structure with sleeping rooms on the upper floor. This practice is not without its advantages, since a great many people object very seriously to the inherent lack of privacy which is associated with homes of only one floor. There is also a feeling of safety from intrusion when a means is provided whereby the valuable of the household may be placed somewhere other than on the ground floor. It is usually possible to obtain a better arrangement of the bedrooms and bath by including these rooms in a group which will occupy an entire floor, and this allows the use of the entire floor for the living rooms, dining room and kitchen. This feature is of special importance during the winter signed with a little more than the typical attention to detail and with a determination to furnish sufficient room for the comfort and convenience of a fairly large-sized family.

By the use of a dense mix of concrete in the substructure of the house, or perhaps the use of some of the many waterproofing materials on the market, the basement of this house may be made very free from dampness, and with the generous grade windows and a suitable division into sections a basement may be formed which will prove its usefulness in a great variety of ways. Furnace room, cold-storage room, laundry and a workshop may all be provided with ample proportions and plenty of light for each.

The first floor contains five rooms and a hall with attractive staircase leading to the upper floor. A large cased opening on one side of the hall leads into the living room with its two large windows. A similar opening on the other side of the hall leads into the parlor, where the first glance discloses the large fireplace, balanced on each side by a window. This room, lighted by the glow of a good fire in the grate, cannot be other than one of attraction on cold winter nights.

Leading from the living room through double doors is the dining room, with its broad curved bay with the buffet built into the wall beneath the high center window. Entrance may be made to the dining room from months, since it is possible thoroughly to air out the bedrooms without interfering with the heating of the other rooms.

Aside from the several advantages which the house with two floors offers in the arrangement of the various rooms it is possible to obtain a very attractive exterior by a suitable selection of building material and color design. In the entirely wooden structure there is the possibility of especially attractive woodwork, distinctive architectural design, and novel painting effects. Modern masonry offers some pleasing effects, carried out in the use of a great variety of fancy stone, brick, terra cotta and other natural and manufactured building materials. By the use of coloring material the stucco house may be made to assume an extremely desirable appearance. Finally, by a combination of several of these, a still more extensive range of exteriors may be produced. It would be a radical taste which could not find satisfaction in one of the possibilities of house-exterior design.

The perspective shown here illustrates a very attractive design of a large family house having for its exterior a combination of stucco and colored shingles, which blend together the outside by a double door with full-length panels.

The kitchen occupies the center of the rear portion of the first floor, with rear entrance from the porch. Conveniently near the swinging-door entrance to the dining room is the cupboard, sink and range. This arrangement could hardly be improved to produce greater facilities for serving, a feature which should strongly commend itself to housewives. A very generous closet is also provided for the storage of kitchen utensils and other articles needed in this part of the house.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the entire design is the sun parlor leading from the kitchen and front parlor. This room, with its seven windows, will no doubt be the most used room in the house in all kinds of weather. By replacing the sash with screens during the summer months a room is provided which will furnish all the advantages of being out of doors, without the annoyance of insects. Since there is an entrance to the kitchen, this room provides a very pleasant breakfast porch, a feature which will be appreciated by all who have had the opportunity to take their morning meal in the open air.

The second floor contains three large bedrooms, a sewing room and bathroom. The hall makes all of these rooms independent of one another, and the cased opening off of it into the sewing room specializes this little room as the most attractive on this floor. A feature of special convenience is the large closet space allowed to each of the bedrooms.

Considered in its entirety this house design is one which offers a great many features not ordinarily found incorporated in one house, and to the family needing a house of this size, especially if they have located in one of our smaller cities, it suggests the possibility of a home of rare attraction.

An item of considerable importance in the selection of a house is the possibility of its fitting into the general scheme of the surrounding landscape. It is possible material; to spoil the appearance of an otherwise beautiful home by an improper selection of its surroundings. The house described here should be placed, preferably, on a rather wide lot with a moderate terrace in front. It will look well if set off against a background of trees and shrubs carefully placed at the rear and sides of the premises. The front porch will be set off to advantage by a bed of flowers set along the front and side. Thus surrounded by trees, shrubs, flowers and well-kept grass this home should be very attractive.

to form an effect which will attract more than passing attention anywhere. The number of possible color combinations between the shingles and stucco is practically unlimited.

Furthermore the easy slope of the roof, the exposed beams with their fancy carving, the lattice work and heavy brackets and beams above the upper windows, the massive stucco pillars on the porch, and the smaller columns in the front windows, all contribute to the general excellence of this exterior design. The unusual features give a distinction which cannot be overlooked. The entire structure is an example of the typical house designed with a little more than the typical attention to detail and with a determination to furnish sufficient room for the comfort and convenience of a fairly large-sized family.

Valuation of Producing Mines for Taxation Placed at More than $54,705,910 Above Last Year.

Western Newspaper Union News Service

Phoenix—The value of the producing mines of Arizona for purposes of taxation as fixed by the tax commission for the year is $172,731,913.92, a gain over last year of $54,705,910.18. Of this gain about $19,000,000 is accounted for by the valuation of the Inspiration, which is placed at over $20,000,000 against less than $2,000,000 at which it was assessed for 1915. Another new mine added to the roll this year is the United Verde Extension, assessed at $5,260,280.73.

The valuation of all the great copper mines have been increased, the Copper Queen and the United Verde, the former by about $5,000,000; and the latter by about $9,000,000; Ray Consolidated by about $3,000,000; the Arizona Copper Company by about $4,000,000.
